Limited to One Killed, Says Official Report; American Steamer Seized.

LONDON, June 5.—British troops have driven the Sinn Fein from their main position in Ulster and a large part of the border between northern and southern Ireland now is virtually a battle front. The village of Pettigoe was recaptured yesterday and the southern forces also were reported to have evacuated Belok, 10 miles to the southwest.

Belmont, June 5.—Authentic details of the recapture of Pettigoe show that a British staff officer entered the village yesterday and gave the Republicans 15 minutes to leave, some at once departed but about 100 decided to oppose the military.

At the expiration of the time limit the British crossed the bridge to the village and were greeted with machine-gun and rifle fire. Then the British artillery went into action and when the first shell landed on a hill behind the town some of the defenders dashed for safety. Four more shells followed, one striking in the middle of a party of recreating Sinn Feiners, inflicting several casualties. Troops which had been landed secretly took the Republicans in the rear but some escaped. When the occupation of the village was complete soldiers were detailed to bury the dead.

Republicans stationed at vantage points with machine-guns held out ring but the troops replied with a few guns. It is believed that one Sinn Fein gun crew was wiped out. It is officially stated that, but one member of the crown forces was killed. Seven Republicans are known to have been killed while 16 were captured.

It is understood, Belok, 10 miles from Pettigoe, is still held by the Republicans. Intense enthusiasm is reported by the Press Association correspondent to have prevailed in Pettigoe after the Republicans were driven out.

Miss Babbage is reported to be very ill, as is little Miss Crowley. The same symptoms which prevailed in the first cases reported preceded their illness. Mrs. Emery Brutosky, wife of the doctor, has been very sick since becoming a victim of the malady. The new cases bring the total to 26.

COAL OPERATORS WILL TAKE PART IN HOOVER CONFERENCE

Region Producers Decide to Take Step in the Price
Control Plan.

SUGGEST $4.50 MAXIMUM

As Fale Under Prevailing Conditions in the Connellsville District; Committee of Six Is Selected to Attend
Meeting in Washington Wednesday.

At a meeting of about 30 independent coal producers of Fayette county held in Uniontown Saturday afternoon, the producers agreed to that $4.50 be the maximum price for coal mined from the Pittsburgh seam in this section.

Congressman Kendall expressed the view that the Connellsville region should take step in the movement suggested by Secretary Hoover to prevent, by voluntary action, a threatening of coal prices during the strike. Mr. Kendall further suggested that the region should have representatives at the conference in order to present the region's claims for a higher price than has recently been paying in the markets, and higher than the price already suggested for coals of other districts because of the conditions prevailing here, and also because of the heavy expenses incurred by efforts made necessary to protect mining properties from damage during the strike.

For these reasons the agreement was reached that $4.50 per ton be suggested as the maximum price which should not be exceeded during the absence of the strike. W. W. Parsh, J. Edgar Huested, George Whelr, E. D. Brown, T. J. McClellan and John H. Moore were selected as members of the committee to attend the conference with Secretary Hoover.

To this conference Secretary Hoover has invited representatives of the retail coal dealers. The object is to secure their cooperation in order to insure to the public and coal consumers the benefits to be derived from the ceiling of about 50 per cent of the previous week's prices. The producers who met in a similar conference last week and voluntarily agreed to place a fair maximum on the price of coal at the mines. Later in the week Secretary Hoover will hold a similar conference with the whole coal dealers.

CHARACTER AND SERVICE SPELL
SUCCESS IN LIFE

They Are the Greatest Factors,
Dr. Cloyd Goodnight Tells
D. T. R. Graduates.

MORE AMERICANISM URGED

Respectful character and service as the greatest factors in life, in this world, Dr. Cloyd Goodnight, president of Trinity College, told the members of the Junior class of the Dunbar Township High School and several hundred citizens Sunday evening during the delivery of the annual address to the graduates at the high school auditorium at Uniontown.

Speaking of the words of Paul as found in the ninth verse of the 10th chapter of First Corinthians, "For a great door and effectual is opened unto me and there are many adversaries," and having for his subject "Traits of Character for Service," Dr. Goodnight declared that in this modern day it is character that gives business its drive and its growth.

"If you have character above intelligence," he said, "there is nothing that can keep you down." The "great door," Dr. Goodnight said, never opens to the man of words who neglects himself or himself adding that it is character that gives you power, lustre, ability. Your own being, your character will give you the ability to open the door.

As strongly as anything else touched upon by Dr. Goodnight, Americanism was the subject of his address. He said that it is the duty of every citizen to do the work it should do. "You should have a passion for the knowledge of things American that will make good American citizens. In these days we need to do everything in our power to encourage Americanism. If ever there was a time when we need to be careful of the things that make for Americanism that time is now."

Continuing this line of thought and the necessity for study of the English language, American history and American civics, Dr. Goodnight deplored the fact that in three West Virginia high schools the authorities had taken upon themselves to discontinue the teaching of American history and civics until the state interfered, and he said that he would not be surprised if his critics with the assertion that "an people is ever greater than the power of its language to express its ideas of life."

Telling the members of the class that education is a selective process in the high school and in the college and university, Dr. Goodnight said that statistics show that but six per cent of the population graduates from high schools and one per cent from colleges and universities. Education, he said, is an elimination process.

PRODUCTION OF COAL
NINTH STRIKE WEEK
REDUCED BY HOLIDAY

Memorial Day Observance Causes
Decrease in Car Loadings
In All Districts.

LOSS ABOUT 100,000 TONS

As Compared With Preceding Weeks;
Accumulations of Unfilled Cars and Consumers' Stock Decline; Little
Little Change; Coal at a Standstill.

Special to The Courier.
WASHINGTON, June 5.—The ninth week of the coal strike, May 29-June 3, will show a decrease in production, largely because of the observance of Memorial Day, says the weekly report of the United States Geological Survey. The returns so far received point to an output of between 4,500,000 and 4,750,000 tons. Production of anthracite remains practically zero.

For the eighth week, May 22-27, complete returns indicate an output of 4,850,000 tons of bituminous coal and 10,000 tons of anthracite, a total of 4,860,000 tons of all coal. It is significant that the cumulative production of coal, anthracite and bituminous, since the strike began is now some 30,000,000 short of what was produced during the corresponding period of the great strike of 1912. The difference is due to the fact that in the earlier strike the anthracite miners were not called out and that even the bituminous miners were lack at work by the seventh week.

Loadings on Monday of the week May 29-June 3 were 15,932 cars, the last run for any Monday since the strike began. On Tuesday, however, because of the Memorial Day holiday, observed in many localities, loadings dropped to 11,142 cars. They recovered promptly on Wednesday, only to decline again on Thursday, partly because of the occurrence of pay day. It therefore seems probable that the total output for the week will fall considerably short of that in the week preceding.

No great change in the number of men on strike has yet occurred. Production is increasing very slowly in the Connellsville region, and more rapidly in Southeastern Kentucky and Tennessee. In the union and open-shop districts of West Virginia there is a slight but perceptible increase. In none of the strongly organized districts, however, has work been resumed, and there are still thousands of miners on strike in the non-union districts of Pennsylvania.

The accumulation of unladen coal is declining. Consumers' stocks of both anthracite and bituminous coal are falling steadily but by how much cannot be accurately stated for the present rate of consumption is not known accurately.

Residue coke production was at a standstill in the eighth week of the strike. The total output was 101,000 net tons, barely 21 per cent of that in the corresponding week of 1920.

The cumulative production for the year to date is now 11 per cent behind that of the year of depression, 1921.

In the Connellsville region, the district most affected by the strike, a very slight increase in production occurred. According to The Courier, the output for the region was 59.15 net tons, against 57.433 tons, the week before. This statement is confirmed by reports to the Geological Survey of cars of coke loaded daily by the carriers serving the Connellsville region. It is to be noted that the eighth week of the strike finds production still 66 per cent below the pre-strike level.

school after entering the freshman class. Many things the young man and young woman should know in starting the real battle of life were stressed. Food has much to do with happiness, contentment and power of a people, he said. "You must have the right things for food. The religious consequence of an economic order which provided good food is worth while."

The speaker rapped the method of study today of English grammar. "Which I was a boy in school, we learned the parts of speech in action. I have a boy today for high school who does not know parsing from a thrashing machine," he said.

Some of Dr. Goodnight's sayings were:

"Your ability and desire to meet the challenge of difficulties will be the thing that will commend you and set you forward."

"If we only know we know a little we are fairly well off."

"In any bargain (for employment) the pay should be the last item to be discussed. Better find out if you are qualified to put into the work that thing will help meet the occasion."

"The main thing is service, to do the type of work for which you are fitted and to put in the hours that you should."

"You will never get forward in this world unless you disregard hours and have regard for service."

Rev. William Hamilton pronounced the invocation. Rev. O. B. Emerson of Dawson read the Bible lesson and offered prayer. The choir of the Christian Church of Connelville sang, with Mrs. H. B. Mason as accompanist. The speaker of the evening was introduced by R. K. Smith, superintendent of the township schools.

ENJOYS FIRST HEARTY MEAL IN SIX YEARS

Stomach Trouble Had Almost Completely Wrecked Her Health, Says Pittsburg Resident—Now Well.

"By the help of Tania I have overcome a case of stomach trouble that had almost completely wrecked my health," asserted Mrs. Gertrude Poth, 914 Cabot way, South Side, Pittsburg, Pa., recently.

"I had not known what it was to enjoy a hearty meal in six years and many times I went without eating at all rather than endure the misery that was sure to follow. I also had severe headaches and dizzy spells and often became so weak I could not do my housework."

"My nerves were in a wretched condition and I could not sleep and my condition continued to get worse in spite of all I could do. I now eat three hearty meals a day and never feel a touch of indigestion. I sleep like a child at night and simply feel like a new person. I am glad to give this statement to be used in letting others know about Tania."

MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 5, 1933.

WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO TO HELP?

The statement of the financial condition and explanation of the needs of the Connelville school district, submitted by President Matthews at the commencement exercises on Friday evening, is by far the frankest and most informing the school board has made in recent years. Possessing these qualities the statement ought to be helpful in enabling taxpayers to more clearly understand the present situation and to aid in enlisting their interest and cooperation in meeting it.

The statement gives official confirmation of the facts, already generally but not so definitely known, that the school board is confronted by the perplexing and difficult problem of keeping up the schools and carrying the bonded and floating indebtedness incurred through the erection of new buildings and annual deficits in receipts, without having means of enlarging the district's resources other than increasing taxes.

This exposition of the facts of the situation makes it plain—almost painfully plain—that a large sum of money will be required to maintain the schools during the ensuing year than ever before in the history of the district. Concurrently the other unpleasant and consequent fact is brought home to the taxpayers that they will have to make heavier tax contributions to the cause of popular education than during any preceding year.

This, it must be contended, is not an agreeable situation to face and to do so with equanimity will require about all the courage, and nearly all the loose change, the taxpayers can muster. It is all the more unpleasant and disagreeable at this time when there has not yet been brought about that degree of extent of readjustment, following the war, which is essential to a more generally distributed prosperity, or a more equitable division of opportunities to share in the benefits of a revival in business and industry.

Such an excessive taxation for any purpose is to be deplored as a handicap to thrift, or objected to as a burden on property owners and wage earners, the school situation in Connelville has been set forth with so much clearness by Mr. Matthews that there can be no doubt or misunderstanding as to the necessity for heroic action.

Two facts of the situation are unescapable. The first is that, in order to maintain our schools up to present day standards and with their auxiliary and diversified activities, and to make a partial reduction in floating indebtedness, will cost the district approximately $236,000 during the year 1932-33, without counting contingencies that may arise.

The second of the outstanding facts is that the estimated revenues of the year, after increasing the millage from 25 to 27 and levying a per capita tax of 45 on all persons 21 and over, and including the state appropriation of $35,000 and $35,000 million from non-resident students, will barely provide sufficient funds to meet the budget of estimated expenses. Even if estimated receipts realize 100 per cent, which they will not, they will remain at least $70,000 of floating indebtedness to be carried forward, thus precluding the possibility of any reduction in taxation during the next succeeding school year. If there be increase in maintenance and operating costs during the year beginning next September, to which the present budget applies, it will not even be possible to retain the tax rate at the present level, much less afford a reduction, next year.

and has given explicit information as to the uses to which it is to be applied. This is a commendable change, previous boards having been more or less disposed to keep these important details from the public, a policy which has not tended to invite what Mr. Matthews characterized as "the best thought by which taxes can be lowered or kept at their present level."

Although we may now be paying part of the penalty imposed by the lack of courage of earlier boards to face the then developing situation, speculation or argument as to the cause of or responsibility for the existing condition of school finances will profit little at this time.

The question to which attention must now be given is: What are we going to do, to help work out a solution of the increasingly perplexing problem of making our school income keep pace with the steady expansion of school needs?

Disappointing the Country

Cleveland Metal Trade

Whether the railroad shippers and maintenance-of-way men vote to strike some time in July, following the reduction of three to five cents an hour ordered by the Railway Labor Board at Chicago several days ago, is not so much the point as the decision in the minds of business men as that the reduction order came at the wrong time. Had this reduction been ordered two or three months ago when it would have done some good in a psychological sense since then the country needed it, business men would have hailed it as a sign of progress. Such a wage cut coming only in the spring would have found itself in an atmosphere of wage reductions. The award likely would have been accepted then without question.

Within two months, however, the situation has changed. Just now wage reductions are passe. Labor is growing scarce in important industrial sections and wages again show indications of advancing. In fact, a 10 per cent advance has been put into effect in some industrial portions of the country in the effort to attract labor into industry. The psychological effect of the railroad cut, small as it is, has been lost upon the country generally. Of course, the railroads will accept the reduction gladly, just as they would accept any enforced saving in revenues; but it does not mean much at this time because of the small amount.

Somewhat similar in its effect ultimately is expected to follow the 10 per cent horizontal freight rate reduction ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Leaving aside consideration of the confusion, delay and general upsetting of the lake and canal trade by the cloud of uncertainty left hanging over this trade by this general freight cut, it would appear this cut will have just as inflationary effect upon general business when it finally gets into operation as the famous five per cent freight reduction in the autumn of 1915 which was to revive business but which when it came was delayed so long as to have lost its point. In fact, the five per cent advance was lost in the shuffle and its impress upon general business was all.

Which brings the question, whether government boards which were originally appointed to do certain definite things, save time and thus give the country action when most needed upon important matters have not outlived their usefulness as to this factor of timeliness and promptness. Competent authorities hold Congress for some other body ought to prod these bodies into recognition of this fact.

A strike by the maintenance men would cause the labor board to lose caste, prestige, which it can ill afford. The Interstate Commerce Commission in its decision seems to have satisfied nobody.

Some way ought to be provided to make these bodies more amenable to reason since the general welfare is involved in their decisions.

J. R. Mestrezat in Hospital.

J. R. Mestrezat, teller at the bank of the Title & Trust Company of Western Pennsylvania, underwent an operation in Uniontown for appendicitis Friday night and is resting easily. He had been umpiring a baseball game Friday evening and although he noticed a sharp pain in his side gave it no serious thought. Later it became worse and a physician said an operation would be necessary.

Club Officers to Meet.

A meeting of officers and the board of governors of the Pleasant Valley Country Club will be held tomorrow evening at the office of Attorney R. S. Matthews.

Just Folks

Edgar A. Guest.

WHEN THERE'S COMPANY FOR TEA.

When there's company for tea,
Change so mighty hard with me;
Till the last guest's cleaned his plate,
An' I mustn't ask Ma what Kind of pie it is she's got,
An' don't touch my napkin up
Or dip cookies in my cup.

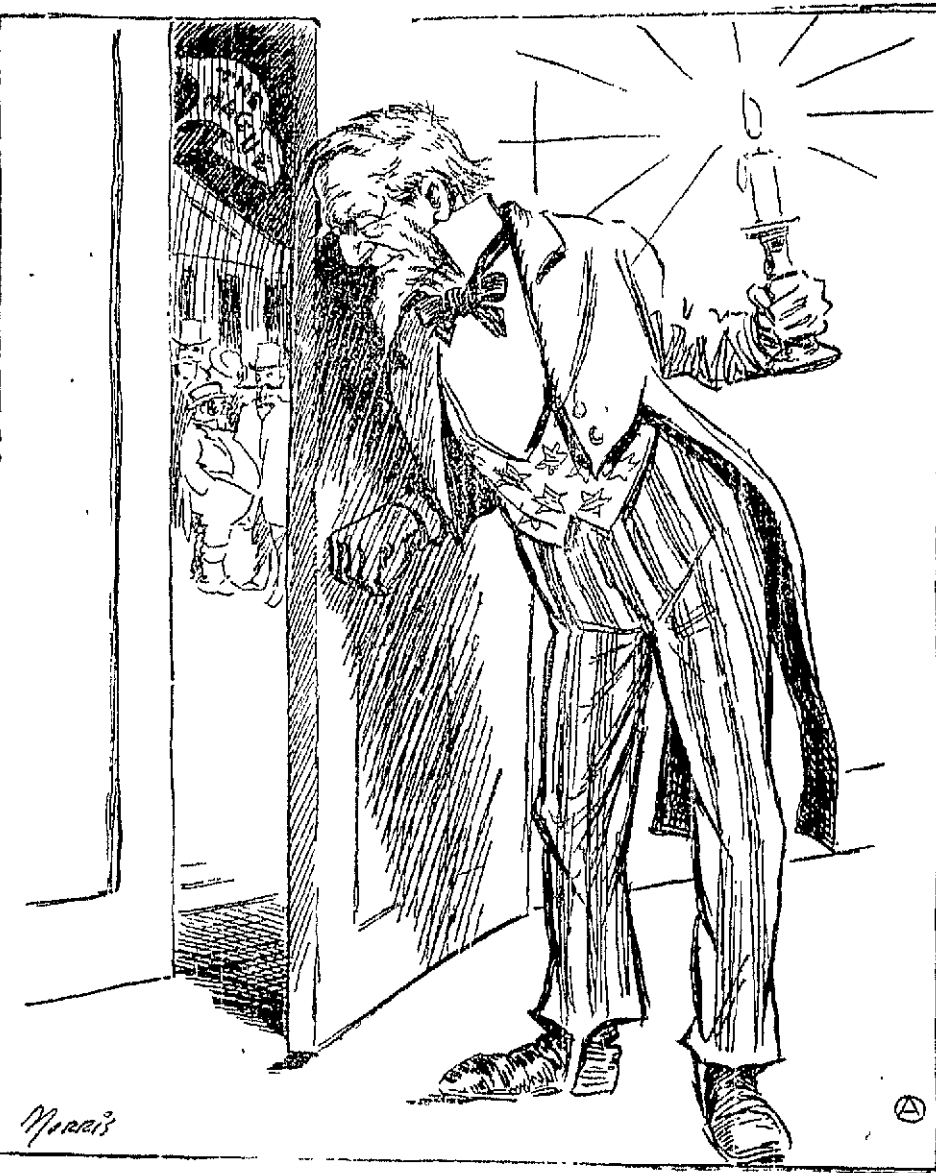

When there's company for tea,
Home isn't seem like home to me;
For the servants wait on me
Till they do not show a speck.
Got to brush my hair an' then
Got to change my waist again,
Then wash an' dress in new
An' try to be a gentleman.

When there's company for tea,
Ma spends hours instructing me
How to eat an' what to say,
An' I can't go out to play
When I've finished, but must stay
Till Ma whispers "Now you may"
Till Ma still is not much fun
When you've got your supper done.

When there's company for tea,
Then the servant waits on me
Till the servant waits on me
Till the servant waits on me
Till the servant waits on me
Till the servant waits on me
Till the servant waits on me
Till the servant waits on me

Shriners Will Hold Outing At Idlewood Park June 22

J. OLLIE BAER
General Chairman Syria Temple Auto Club Outing.

Shriners of Western Pennsylvania will abandon the hot sands of the desert and their camels for the sylvan shade of Idlewood Park and a beautiful automobile trip on Thursday, June 22. This event will be the annual outing of the Automobile Club of Syria Temple, A. A. O. of Mystic Shrine.

Automobiles will replace the camels when the various caravans begin the trip to Idlewood, which in this case will be the Mecca for all the Shriners of Western Pennsylvania. Every section of the territory embraced by Syria Temple will be represented at the outing which this year gives promise of surpassing the gatherings of other years.

Fred A. Fitchel, president of the automobile club has appointed all the necessary committees and the members of these committees have not attended themselves in any manner to make this year's outing the biggest and best picnic. All the big towns in this district, including Greensburg, Connelville, Uniontown, Latrobe, Washington, Waynesburg, the Beaver Valley and the Allegheny Valley will send out their caravans of automobiles.

The biggest caravan will leave Pittsburgh and travel via New Kensington, but this string of autos will be joined enroute and those from other sections will go direct to the park.

Special parking space for over 1,000 cars for the exclusive use of members of Syria Temple Automobile Club has been arranged, so there will be no trouble for members securing their cars when the caravan heads homeward that night after the big time.

A well-known orchestra from Greensburg will furnish the music on the grounds and every minute of the day will be crowded with some exhilarating event. There will be a baseball game, races of various kind and comical interesting sporting events galore. There will be balloon ascensions and dancing and coffee, ice cream, cones, butter milk, lemonade will be served free.

J. Ollie Baer has been made general chairman and he has gathered around him a bunch of live wires as heads of the various committees. John Gantner is chairman of the gate committee; Frank Davidson of Greensburg of the refreshment committee; George Myers, the reception committee; Harry A. Vinton, sports committee; Melvin Knoopp, baseball; L. U. Neuplin, dance pavilion; Paul W. Huhn music; R. V. Daniels, route committee; Robert Buhl, safety committee.

Good Games Scheduled in Two Local Leagues This Week; Other Sport Items

The Fayette Bakers will play the Baltimore & Ohio team in the City League at Fayette Field tonight, weather permitting. The railroaders are anticipating an easy victory, but recently the bakery organization has been coming at a better pace and is determined that no more teams in the league shall count games scheduled with them won before they are played.

Tomorrow evening a game which may prove an exceptionally good one will be played on the same grounds between the Juniors and the Lennox Club. Both of these aggregations are strong, with the latter having a shade in favoritism.

A game will be played in the Church League tomorrow evening also. The Christians and Covenanters are tied for combat at May Field. South Connellsville. Two Church League clashes are also listed for Friday evening, one at South Connellsville and the other at Fayette Field. The former is between the Presbyterians and United Presbyterians, and the second will feature the Lutherans and Evangelicals.

The Lennox Club and Baltimore & Ohio team will play a Booster Day game Thursday at Fayette Field. An interesting clash will be inevitable when these teams meet, and no ground is being given by the backers of either.

The B. & O. team is confident of its ability to defeat the Westinghouse Bloomer Girls here on Wednesday, June 14. It will be the first appearance of the lassies here and the railroaders expect to fill Fayette Field.

The Giants gained a half game on the Pirates yesterday when McGraw's team won from Brooklyn, 5-4, while the Bucs were idle.

Babe Ruth made his third home run yesterday with two on the bases against the Athletics, putting his team ahead in the fifth inning. The Yanks won, 8-3.

The Connellsville Malays are ready to open the ball season. The uniforms for the team are expected to arrive within a few days and games are being booked away from home. Clubs desiring games write J. W. Brown, Star Route, Connellsville, Pa.

The Connellsville Independents have just another month in which to be ready for the game were on July 6 with the Detroit Tigers. The American Leaguers will stop off here on their way to Washington.

Pitcher Hubbel of the Phillies will wear a steel mask to protect his head against hard-hit balls when he returns to the mound. He was recently injured by a line drive. He left the hospital yesterday.

The Klondikes have two games scheduled for the home lot at Poplar Grove this week. On Tuesday evening Pennsville will be the attraction, and on Friday evening the North End Rangers will be there for a contest. Both games will be called at 5:30 o'clock.

The West Side Hill Tops won from Morrell yesterday at Morrell, by a score of 18-3. It was the sixth straight game for the West Siders. J. Ruhl, Harrell and Riordan worked for the Hill Tops and Forkin and Span were the Morrell battery.

At the Theatres

THE SOISSON

"THE LOTUS EATER," the feature picture today, Tuesday and Wednesday at this theatre, is a Paramount production, with John Barrymore, the famous actor, supported by pretty Colleen Moore, Wesley Barry, and other favorite screen stars, in the leading role.

Barrymore plays the part of Jacques Lenoir, who was born in a villa on the Mediterranean, while his father was traveling the seven seas in search of health. Hearing suddenly, Lenoir, Sr., discovered his wife in a compromising situation. Taking the lad with him, he set out again in his yacht.

Broken by his marital woes, the father ages quickly and the realization comes to him, when the boy is seven years old, that death is not far off. To shield the boy from his own bitter experience, the father compels Jacques to promise him that he will not leave the yacht until he is 25 years old.

Educated by private tutors, Jacques does not leave the yacht until the appointed time. Landing in New York, he hurries to the office of his father's attorney, and there meets Madge Vance, young and pretty. It is a case of love at first sight with both. There is a romantic courtship and a hurried marriage on his yacht.

But the father's fears are realized, for clouds appear on the domestic horizon. Jacques, broken hearted, leaves for a dirigible trip over the Pacific Ocean. Then begin a series of strange adventures—and in the end, Jacques finds the love for which his unsophisticated heart yearns.

THE PARAMOUNT

"COME ON OVER," a Goldwyn picture is the feature attraction today and tomorrow at this theatre. As wholesome, breezy and rapid a comedy as the screen has unfolded in years is the new Rupert Hughes picture, "Come On Over." It is screen fun at its highest point of achievement, and the public should thank Mr. Hughes, the Goldwyn Company, the director and the excellent cast for an hour of pure fun.

When Rupert Hughes writes about the Irish, their humor and their characterizations, he is always amusing and interesting. In this picture he maintains the high level reached in "Hold Your Horses" and "From the Ground Up," distinctively Irish pictures, and in "Scratch My Back" and "The Old Nest."

Colleen Moore gives as charming a performance as she has ever given during her screen career—and this is high praise. Ralph Graves, remembered for his fine work in "Dream Street," is excellent as the Irish lad who leaves his sweetheart in Ireland while he comes to America to make his fortune. The cast is excellent throughout and the picture ends in a note of joy that will keep spectators good-humored for a long time after the end of the picture.

THE ORPHEUM

"THE LOST ROMANCE," which opened today at this theatre for a three day attraction is a Paramount picture featuring Conrad Nagel, Lois Wilson and Jack Holt.

Does romance end with marriage? Does the nuptial vow spell the end of the thing that is vital to a woman's happiness? These are the questions which are delightfully answered in William de Mille's new production, "The Lost Romance."

In the story, written by Edward Knoblock, a noted English playwright and which was dramatized by Olga Printzlau, a young wife is on the point of deserting her husband for his best friend when the sudden disappearance of her child awakens her to the real ties that bind and a broader sense of the real meaning of life and love and romance. With the return of the child, all ends happily and the husband and wife find happiness where before there was discontent and restlessness.

Lois Wilson plays the wife charmingly. Conrad Nagel is the young husband and Jack Holt splendidly portrays the other man. A most delightful role is enacted by Fontaine La Rue, who, as Aunt Betty, carries out a plan which smooths out the situation at the finish of the story and brings the wife to her senses. Others in the cast who did excellent work are Maym Kelan, Robert Brower, Mickey Moore, Clarence Geldart and Clarence Burton.

Rockwell Marietta Charges Cunningham With Forging Name

Rockwell Marietta Friday afternoon made an information against Thomas R. Cunningham, he ore Alder W. D. Colburn charging him with forgery. The information contains 14 specific counts. Mr. Marietta alleges that during the time from 1918 until 1929, Cunningham obtained approximately $17,000 through the forgery of his name to notes which were discounted at local and Southern banks. Cunningham was held for court under bond of $5,000 which was furnished by J. A. Cunningham, father of the accused.

In a civil action against Mr. Marietta brought by the Union National Bank of this city for recovery of the principal and interest on a note discounted by Cunningham, alleged by Mr. Marietta to have been forged, a verdict was rendered against the willing experts and many prominent citizens familiar with the signature of Mr. Marietta testified in the case. Cunningham testified, however, that the signature of Mr. Marietta was genuine. Mr. Marietta alleges that not one of the 14 notes, aggregating more than $17,000 bears his signature.

HURDY GURDY FINANCE

McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
The Rover between the merry-go-round and the pathetic little rickety switchback, John Ames saw a doll-like young girl standing uncertainly alone, with the sunlight shimmering on her curly hair.

In the next instant, half a dozen slowly young men, underdressed but swaggering, swept from the corner of the dilapidated Pretzel garden, and surrounded her.

"Hello, Cutie," said one of the mob, the one with the ugly scar across his nose.

They all laughed, and prepared to take part in this entertaining new game; but the girl, too frightened to scream, darted her way through them like a golden eel, and, seeing nowhere else to go, ran straight towards tall John Ames, spring on him the roundest blue eyes he had ever seen.

There was not much opportunity for a thrilling rescue. The Mud Creek gang made a comprehensive estimate of the athletic-looking, black-haired stranger, and swaggered away, pretending to laugh in a carefree, light-hearted manner.

"Events followed rather precipitately. An iron-faced, thick-bodied man, with a leg and an arm on each side of him, rushed from behind the switchback, dashed into the Mud Creek gang, singled out the young man with the ugly scar on his mouth, grabbed him by the back of his coat collar, and pulled him in the ear with a fist which was crowded with big, rough knuckles.

A close-cropped, full beard, topping a short, solid, prosperous-looking man, came running across the grounds from the pretzel stand.

"Daddy!" cried the golden-haired one, deserting the arm of John Ames, to which she had clung, for a frightened instant, and ran towards the board.

A procession passed, consisting of the iron-faced man, the proprietor of the merry-go-round, two tough waiters and the "barker" for the fortune-teller booth, all kicking the leader of the Mud Creek gang towards the front gate.

"Thank you," said the beard to John Ames. "The portion of face which was white with anger, as he drew the arm of his daughter through his own.

"I'm glad to have been here," returned Ames pleasantly. He felt, rather than saw, the absolutely round blue eyes fixed on him, and it was their brightness more than their helplessness which he afterwards remembered.

Having strained itself to remember the courtesies of the occasion, the beard whited, and had started on a headline for home when the iron-faced man hurried back, a little out of breath.

"That's a rotten shame, Mr. Houston," he objected apologetically. "It's a new gang, and they were never out here on Monday before. They won't—"

The keen eyes above the beard—they were blue, too—stupidly glared at the iron-faced man, and then went away.

"Now he won't come back any more," gruffly mourned the iron-faced man.

Ames looked at the retreating beard with a frown of condemnation. "They shouldn't have been here," he criticized.

The iron-faced man inspected Ames slowly before he answered. "Why not?" he growled. "This is a respectable place on Monday afternoon."

"You're the proprietor. I take it?"

"Joe Wilks," was the answer, not untinged with a certain aggressive claim on respect.

"You should make this place pay," he advised. "This town is prosperous; and it needs a good recreation park."

"If you show me how to make it pay, I'll cut you in on it," gloomily promised the proprietor.

"It shouldn't be a difficult problem," mused Ames, when a badly-mannered business of any sort, distressed immeasurably. "The first thing to do is to clean out these toughs."

Joe Wilks looked at him indignantly. "I want a little piece of change, don't I?" he demanded. "They're the only customers I got."

"They're the only ones you will have, so long as they are here," Ames earnestly advised him. "A decent man spends more money than a tough. I'll bet the gentleman who was here today with that little girl would spend more money than ten of that gang you got out."

"Poltrized a five-dollar William every time he came on the lot!" Ames was silent for a moment.

"Houston, you said his name was, I think," he suggested, and again he had that illusion of two round, blue spots before his eyes.

"Peter G. Houston," responded Joe Wilks, with a sigh. "He has the grandest little business there is; collecting interest on his money. Makes me sore to lose him! Why, he's brought that yellow-headed kid out here every Monday since the wore knee breeches, and she's about eighteen now. I'll bet little Maizie all up not to come here any more. Why, say, I've picked her up out of the mud many a time. She'd always stop crying for a pretzel."

Ames suddenly recognized the identity of those round blue spots were his eyes. They were the appealing stare of Maizie Houston.

"And she can't come here any more," he regretted.

Chapter II.

"I'm afraid I was short this afternoon."

John Ames, drinking a Japanese after-dinner mint at the bar of his hotel, turned to find the beard beside him.

"I didn't notice it," he pleasantly replied.

"I was too mad to be decent," Peter G. Houston went on.

"You were quite justified," said Ames. "Will you join me?"

"No, thanks," responded Houston. "I just happened to see you here, and remembered that I owed you an apology."

"You have an unusually tender conscience," laughed Ames. "I had a talk with the proprietor out there, after you left. He's not such a bad fellow."

"Any future is a bad fellow," declared Houston. "I'll never go near Wilks park again."

"That's what Wilks predicted," returned Ames, with a musing smile. "He seemed more worried by the fact that your daughter would miss her weekly pleasure than by the loss of your patronage."

Houston's eyes, which were blue, softened.

"He always made a fuss over my girl," he acknowledged, and then he smiled whimsically. "I don't know what I shall do now. The only thing I can see to do is to build a merry-go-round and a roller coaster on my back lot."

"It wouldn't be quite the same," Ames retorted. "Why don't you help Wilks, instead, to turn his park into a decent place. The town needs it."

"There are other things," acknowledged Houston, with a reminiscent smile. "I think I'd win the enthusiasm of my daughter, if I were to invest a few thousands in that place, and were able to pick its patronage by invitation."

Ames looked over into the glittering glassware.

"There is always at least one practical way to do anything you want. The only problem is find the right man."

"You talk like the right man," chuckled Houston. "Can't we induce you to rejuvenate Wilks park?"

"I'm afraid not," smiled Ames, a certain wistfulness coming into his eyes. "It's just that the business doesn't attract me, because I have dabbled in all of them more or less; but I haven't seen anything in the town, as yet, which made me care to stay here."

"Lord, how free and footloose you sound!" smiled Houston. "Do you mean to say that you're into business, any old kind at all, only when you happen to like the town you're in?"

"That's about it," mused Ames. "Then stay here long enough to give us a good amusement park," urged Houston, half in jest and half in earnest. "Show me a convincing plan, and I'll back you, if you need backing."

"I certainly would need backing," Ames told him. "I never experiment with my own money. However, I don't see any place in this proposition even for your funds. The park would not yield enough to finance itself."

"If you think of a brilliant scheme, tell me," joked Houston, and, thanking Ames more formally for his opportunistic services of the afternoon, went away.

Ames strolled into the lobby and lit a cigarette, looking out with uneasy eyes on the jostling passersby. Before him he saw two round, blue spots. Poor kid! She couldn't have her playground!

Suddenly Ames grinned and returned quickly to the bar.

"Do you know where I'd be likely to find Mr. Houston at this hour?" he inquired of "Tom."

"Try the Valley City club," advised Tom, with a look at the clock. "I think this is his stud-poker night."

Ames phoned the Valley City club and located Houston.

"This is the amusement park promoter," he stated, by way of identification.

"Oh," returned Houston. "No wonder I couldn't place the name of Ames, when the boy brought me the card."

"I've found a way to make a decent Wilks park profitable."

There was a moment of silence.

"Say, suppose you step over to the club," invited Houston.

Chapter III.

"Alright, John, get busy," reported Peter G. Houston, two weeks later. "I've cleaned up my share of the work."

Thereupon John Ames went out to see the proprietor of Wilks park. He found that gentleman nursing an eye the color of an egg plant.

"Hello, sport," greeted Wilks, placing Ames, after a fractional thought. "You see that Mud Creek gang got me."

"They that live by the fist shall die by the fist," grinned Ames. "How's business, Mr. Wilks?"

"Frotten, thank you," responded Wilks, in deep discouragement. "Saturday night's a riot and the rest of the week's a funeral."

"Let's make a big business out of it," suggested Ames cordially.

"The same dope you handed out before," laughed Wilks. "You know what I told you that time."

"I came out to talk definite business with you," said Ames, leading the way to the idle merry-go-round, and sitting in a scarlet chair. "If I guarantee to increase your receipts, will you give me one-fourth of the net income for the next two years?"

"Would I take a twenty-dollar gold piece?" and Joe Wilks laughed, a process which made a tremendous difference in his face. "What kind of a guarantee are you talking about?"

"United States money," Ames quickly stated.

Joe Wilks, whose face was separated a two broad parts when he smiled,

"Lead me to it," he directed.

"Of course there's a string to it," Ames continued. "You'll be given ten thousand dollars for improvements, on a loan of easy terms, and you will conduct the place as I say. If, at the end of next season, you haven't more than doubled your business, you may cancel your loan."

"Where do I get the money?" he wanted to know, with a lingering trace of suspicion.

"Peter G. Houston," said Ames. "Joe Wilks climbed out of the scarlet chair immediately."

"What's the first thing we do?" he inquired.

"Close down the plant," grinned Ames.

"Hey, you, Bill!" roared the vigorous voice of Joe Wilks. "Turn every sucker out, and lock the gates."

Chapter IV.

Looking up from the plans for a new roller coaster, Ames beheld two blue spots before his eyes.

"Good morning, Mr. Ames," sang the flute-like little voice of Maizie Houston.

"My daughter, Maizie, Mr. Ames," explained Peter G. Houston, with a laugh. "I hope she won't be in the road."

"If she is, we'll move the road," promised Joe, cutting his face in two. This was the first time he had seen Maizie since she had left the park forever.

"I won't be in the road at all, will I, Mr. Ames?" pleaded Maizie.

He laughed at her. Her childlike loquaciousness was refreshing.

"Not a particle," he gaily assured her. "How would you like to run the merry-go-round, all by yourself?"

"O-o-o-h!" and her voice died away in a delightful coo.

"We'll start the engine for you," promised Ames, and John Wilks ran to make himself useful.

"I'm afraid Maizie's spoiled," Mr. Ames, boasted her father, viewing her fondly, as she dashed over to the absurd little engine. "How's the lake coming on?"

"Splendidly," answered Ames, leading the way over past the remains of the one-time switchback. "The bridges for the canal are almost ready to set up, and I think that, by another week, we shall be able to turn the water in."

Houston, with a growing pride in the transformation they were effecting, walked all around the grounds, and smiled, with the return of childlike hood, as he inspected the sandy "fronts" which rose on every hand.

"I saw the chief of police last night," he chuckled. "I won him over at last."

Does Eden Face New Rebellion?

Does another rebellion loom up in the Garden of Eden?

"News that King Faisal has declined to obey recent orders of Great Britain respecting her Mesopotamia mandate may well cause surprise," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

It would seem that the traditional land of Eden and Ararat, the manager of the religions of Christ and Mohammed, the vicinity of the Arryan peoples' birthplace, might be fairly well known to the world. But Mesopotamia of 1922 suffers from being almost completely overshadowed by the historic Suez.

"Many a school child who can relate the nocturnal adventures of Harun-al-Rashid in ancient Baghdad never heard of the Star Worshippers of the present-day Kingdom of Irak. And yet this strange people, who turn to the North Star to pray, who must be baptized every Sunday, and have a sacred book where they may begin at either end and read toward the middle, are just as picturesque."

"If he were shown a picture of shipping on the Tigris River this child would think the rhyme of 'Three men in a tub' had come true. The small boats are gaffas, huge round baskets, from five to 10 feet in diameter, their wickerwork tarred to make them water tight. Then there are the rafts with blow-up goatskins attached to give them buoyancy."

"Modern Baghdad would cause even the man who knew what to expect to rub his eyes. A city as a city all over Europe and America, with certain features that may be relied upon. With one major variation, such as canals instead of streets, a Venice may stand out as a shining exception. But when you enter Baghdad you must accustom yourself to interminable mud walls, more inconspicuous than any standardized row of houses you have seen, narrow and deserted thoroughfares, dogs always under foot and, by night, only the star light to guide your way."

"Mesopotamia is a land of dates; both of the historical and edible varieties. Date trees rise above the courtyards where Baghdad family life is shut from your view, and these trees, along with cupolas and minarets, form a skyline that typifies the religion and the economic life of thousands of present-day natives. For the valleys of the Tigris and the Euphrates, and the muddy banks of Shat el Arab, into which they merge, supply the four corners of the earth with dates. The Arabs of this region pick and pack and practically live on dates.

"About a million and a half of Irak's population are Arabs. The rest are Persians, Kurds, Indians and Turks. Now the oldhand opinion might well be that the Arabs, because they are dominant, would be a nucleus around which a stable government might form. The difficulty is so far is that these Arabs are divided into diverse groups, actually separated by a wide variety of religious beliefs. It has been said that there are more sects in Hebron, as well as the opposite way, than anywhere else excepting the United States. The Moslem sects are far less harmonious than the denominations of our Christian Church, and may of the latter are represented. Besides here are found gradations of Oriental philosophic schools and pagan beliefs, ranging from Buddhism to Star Worship and Devil Worship."
